'An Italian in Paris': Modigliani Unmasked

Jewish Museum

Wednesday, January 17th, 2018

Art for Learning, has obtained special permission from the Jewish Museum for Sheryl Intrator Urman to give a private talk, when the museum is closed, exclusively for her group!

The Complete Picture - Modigliani - 'The Italian in Paris'/Jewish Museum
We start our day with a lite dairy brunch (10:30am) and a talk by Sheryl Intrator Urman, artist and art lecturer, about this 'Italian in Paris'... in a complex and fascinating time. Art and artists don't exist in a vacuum - The Complete Picture of the life and times, the influences on the artist sets the stage for understanding. Paris of the Salons, Paris of the emerging Picasso, Paris where this artist could have assimilated/yet remained true to himself. Modigliani Unmasked presents artist Amedeo Modigliani (1884-1920) in Paris in 1906, when the city was still roiling with anti-Semitism after the long-running tumult of the Dreyfus Affair and the influx of foreign emigres. Modigliani's Italian-Sephardic background helped forge his complex cultural identity. Modigliani's art cannot be fully understood without acknowledging the ways the artist responded to the social realities that he confronted in the unprecedented artistic melting pot of Paris.

Of course, when we visit the exhibit, well prepared by our talk, we will understand these influences and the world around Modigliani: The Complete Picture! Sheryl will be our docent for this exhibit of over 150 works from sketches to paintings to sculpture. It also includes work representative of the various multicultural influences—African, Greek, Egyptian, and Khmer—that inspired the young artist during this lesser-known early period.
