The Colmar Treasure: A Jewish Legacy
Hidden Medieval Treasure At The Cloisters

Metropolitan Museum of Art: The Cloisters
99 Margaret Corbin Drive, Fort Tryon Park

Thursday, October 3, 2019

The Cloisters.... how many of you haven't been here yet?...or not recently? Or if you joined us for the amazing Heavenly Bodies costume exhibit - join us again for a fascinating tribute to Jewish artistry in this uniquely Christian setting.

Meet at the Cloisters: at 1:30 when Sheryl Intrator Urman, artist and art lecturer, will be our Docent will lead us for a 90 minute tour discovering the highlights of the Cloisters and this direct-from-France exhibit of hidden jewels. For more than 500 years, a small cache of jewelry and coins lay hidden within the walls of a house in Colmar, France. Secreted there in the 14th century and discovered in 1863, these treasures comprised of fantastically jeweled rings and brooches. The precious possessions of a single family! Note the inscription mazel tov on a ring - a link to the Jewish community, who were brutally scapegoated and put to death when the Plague struck the region in 1348 - a tribute to Jewish artistic heritage and its role in art and society in medieval Europe. Our experience in days of yore will also include highlights of this museum gem to showcase the role of women, mythology, medicine and more. See the 'old stuff' in a new light. And of course the Unicorn tapestries.

OPTIONAL LUNCH: Meet at 12noon at the lovely New Leaf restaurant in the hidden 'treasure' of Fort Tryon Park for a shared cost lunch. Just a short walk to the Cloisters afterwards.

Yes, Men are welcome! Day over by 3pm.
